The account which we reproduced to Friday, shows that Saturday night at the City Hall Theatre, under young Holmes, a lad of ten years, was riding the patronage of Sir Arthur Kennedy, was a a donkey through some Chinese streets, atstanded by a native lad of sixteen, and that bouse was so thinly attended. However, the white asked complimentary term of "little andience, though select, was an appreciative dovil" was used to him. The native horseboy, instead of prudently leaving the matter alone, took it up, and challenged the men, by asking them whom they were reviling-and they seized upon him, saving he could not rely upon the protection of foreigners, and commonce I pummelling him. The lad, with commendable pluck, went to rescue the native, and received a blow on the head which is described as having felled him to * the ground, but is not said to have been more than the kind of blow which might be given in the heat of conflict to anyone intorfering, and without any very gross conardice. The matter is, however, described in touching language as an "outrage on a child," while the remark of the horse-boy, which was the origin of the fight, "Whom being described as what the Chinese first eleven of the H.R O.O. with brook there can be little doubt from the reply given that they were used in a way to pro- ley and Head, who were opposed to the beatseriously burt, as is proved by the fact that go away with the horse-boy; and the by- had played it before it touched him. It is referred to five wickets to go down. the Consul, and it is suggested that the case should be "firmly" dealt with, chiefly because "all the residents at Tungehow are interested in the matter," and the guilty parties are bonsting round the streets about what they have done, and daring Mrs. Holles, the mother of the lad, to do her utmost. However, the elequent appeal for firmness concludes by orging, with a reference to the assault some time ago on Mr. Wade, that "it remains to be seen what difference there is between being in Peking, and being somewhere else, and in being the British Minister, and being somebody else." This is, of course, an interesting general subject for discussion, just us it is amusing to discuss how many but it has after all comparatively little to do H. E. Gamble, o Miller, energetic horse boys resent the fise of language of the kind not addressed to themgolves, and a fight ensure, the parties to the fight ought to be punished according to their respective deserts for a breach of the public peace; and, finally, if a youngster mires up in an affrit, tugs at the dress of one of those engaged in it, and receives a blow, the Magistrate may consider what kind of a blow was given, and how far there was a provocation to strike a lad, and having done so, punish accordingly. This, it appears to us, is the atmost that any firmfuess on the part of the Consul can lead to, and we cannot but deprecate the intemperate manner in which the affair is treated. The peculiar wording of the account gives evidence, if we are not at once." It seems, therefore, very much as if the horseboy's account of the affair had been taken down verbation et literation, and relied upon as un undoubted version. It does not seem to occur to the corres pondent of our northern contemporary that it was the very height of im-of age to go about with no other protection than a horseboy of sixteen, in a place where, according to the account given, there was every likelihood of foreigners being insulted. Nobody in his senses would allow two lads to go about in the same way in the dangerous parts of London or New York, but in China this is done, and when trouble arises, the Consul is at once rushed to and urged to act "firmly." So far from the matter showing any grave ill-feeling on the part of the people, it is clear they were sensible of the impropriety of the attack on the lade as they put an end to it, if not at once, as soon as possible—this being a rather unusual piece of activity in China, where, as is well outside the public markets, in contravention of known, the natives are most loath to mir up $2 each. in any disturbance. This raised an important question of commercial law as to what is the effect of a common course of business where bills are bent as securi ty, and it is stipulated as an additional security that bills of lading or other similar documents as representing goods are to be sent as additional securities. The plaintiffs carry on the business of bankers in Chiffs and London, and the defendants are merchants in London, and the action was brought to recover from them the amount of two bills of exchange for £5,000 each, drawn by a Hongkung firm, Lyall and Co., upon, and accepted by, the defendants, and endorsed by Lyall and Co. to the plaintiffs, the Hongkong Bank. The Straits Times of the 26th states :- We understand the town has been proclaimed under the Preservation of the Peace Ordinance so as to place greater power in the hands of the authorities in the case of a riot, which seems imminent.

A very serious affray occurred last night at a tavern called the "Fortune of War." on the corner of Tanjong Pagar and New Harbour roads, between some men of the 80th Regiment from the steamer Scotland, and some sailors belonging to that vessel. There was, we hear, a fight between a sailor and a soldier in the afternoon at this tavern, which resulted in the arrest of the parties. In the evening, a patrol of soldiers, with side-arms, was sent out from the ship to look for stragglers, but the attractions of the tavern, and the fact of it being Christmas, proved too great for them, and the patrol remained there, drinking with the sailors and others, until a late hour, when, as usual when sailors and soldiers meet at a drinking bout, the entertainment wound up with a fight. The coldiers used their bayonets, and the sailors their knives, and anything else they could get hold of. One of the sailors was killed, we believe

The police arrived while the fight was going on, and Corporal Barrow, a European police officer, while endeavouring to make arrests and aton the row received two or three bayonet scratches, and was pretty well beaten. Reinforcements arrived, however, and a number of combatants were arrested; and several others were taken into oustody this morning from on board the steamer, for havin been concerned in the fight. Among the tre phies secured by the police are, an old fashion cutluss covered with rust, and with spote blood on it, -a jack knife with a pointed blad about four inches long, and a heavy iron bel ing-pin. CHARGE AGAINST A BANKER. On November 21st, at the Mansion-house, Mr. Robert Bowles, 43, an American, described as a banker, was charged with having transferred, pledged, and converted to the use of himself and his firm certain securities with which they had been entrusted. Mr. George Lewis, jun., solicitor, conducted the prosecution. In opening the case be observed that the investigation would be of considerable commercial importance, it being, in fact, imputed to the prisoner that he, being a banker, had appropriated to his own use securities entrusted to him for safe oustody by his clients. The prisoner was one of the firm of Bowles Brothers and Co., who had carried on business for the past few years as bankers in London, New York, Geneva, and Paris, and having banking-houses in those cities. The firm stopped payment at the commencement of the present month, owing £80,000. The prisoner had had the management of the London bouse, and his three brothers were abroad. Mr. Lewis feured that the investigation would liselose the fact that instead of the firm having of late carried on legitimate banking operations, t had been dragging on its existence by pledgby the customers' securities, by which means it ad secured an advance from the Union Bank London of no less an amount than £16,000. prosecutors in this case were Mesars. Agiout and Sons, bankers at Naples. Havoccusion to require the ordinary banking thity of drawing upon London, they arranged h Mesers, Bowles to honour their draughts, ly from time to time remitting them funds to so. Mesers. Bowles, however, required some accordingly deposited with them 200 Lombardo Venetian bonds, of the value of £2,200. On hearing of the failure of fitessis. Howies, One the prosecutors came to this country with a view to obtain a return of the securities, but on applying to the prisoner, he found to his great surprise that, instead of the securities being intact as they ought to have been, they had been pledged by the firm, with other clients' bonds, to the Union Bank of London for an advance of £16,000. The prisoner had only been arrested that morning, and Mo. Lewis would be, therefore, only able to give such brief evidence as would justify a remand.

Mr. Antonio Thomas D'Agiout said he is a

Requiring for the purposes of banking business to draw upon that firm witness entered into agreement with it with that view in March, 1871. He produced a letter from Mesers. Bowles acknowledging the receipt of 210 Lombardo-Venetian bonds, with coupons attached as collateral security for such draughts as witness's firm might draw upon them, either at short sight, not less than three days, or at 60 or 90 days' sight. It was arranged that thedraughts honoured by Messrs. Bowles should be paid to them within a month; that in the event of the failure of his firm to fulfil the conditions of the agreement the bonds might be disposed of, and that otherwise, on the closing of accounts between them, the securities should be returned. Pursuant to that agreement, he had deposited with Mesars. Bowles 200 bonds of the value of £2,200, for safe custody, and be had from time to time retired the draughts of his firm as they became due. There was now a debt of about £172 against his firm, which he was perfectly ready to pay. In the beginning of this month Messrs. Bowles stopped payment, o ving about £80,000. In consequence, he came to England for the purpose of taking away the debentures. On Monday last he saw the prisoner, who was the only partner in England, and who had managed the London business, and asked bim for the securities. He replied that he knew nothing of the business, and that witness must speak to Mr. Keith, the manager. Later that day he again saw the prisoner, who onnee RAVINS DUCK, suitable for Boat Sails told him that the bonds were in the Union or Awnings, Banks with many other securities of their clients, adding, "It is a felony we have committed. lam in such a state I can't say anything more." Next day the prisoner stated that the, oum for which the securities were pledged was £16,000; that he would telegraph to America for the money, and then release the securities, and that the rest of the creditors might go to the dogs. Witness had ascertained that the securities had, in fact, been pledged rized the pledging of the securities. The prisoner being asked if he had any question to put to the witness, replied in the negative. He wished, however, to deny ever baying said the fest of his creditors might go to the dogs, or that he would telegraph to America for the money. He had, in fact, never had anything to do with that part of the basiness, or the firm to which the transaction related.
